To the 2019 Selection Committee Members of Forty Under 40:

It is with great honor that I recommend Amy Boyce to the Forty Under 40, Class of 2019. She is an extremely talented and effective leader. Her well-maintained balance of professional accomplishments, community involvement, and volunteer service make her a perfect candidate for this award.

In her current role at Aureon, Amy's primary function is to work closely with the leadership team to identify and develop emerging talent and to create successions plans for leadership roles. She has led a number of key projects including the implementation of a Learning Management System, providing development communications to staff members, and provides ongoing support for the leadership team. With each new endeavor, Amy adds incredible talent and true value.

She recently achieved her Certified Professional in Learning and Performance (CPLP) and Certified Administrator of Center for Creative Leadership Assessments. This lifelong learner's ongoing commitment to understanding best practices and new methodologies make her a dynamic young leader at Aureon.

While so much of her impact has been proven within the workplace, Amy continues to shine through her engagement in civic and volunteer activities. She tackles key leadership roles for multiple professional organizations including the Association for Talent Development and her involvement in the Corporate Games, Habitat for Humanity builds, and representing Aureon in events like the American Heart Association and Iowa's Healthiest State Initiative walks.

Anyone who has worked with Amy knows that she provides a reliable, solid commitment to each organization and is proactive about strategic solutions and implementation. Amy also proudly serves her community by volunteering with a number of organizations, including her involvement with St. Pius X Catholic Church's Connection Café, serving meals to those in need within Des Moines.

I highly recommend Amy Boyce to the Forty Under 40, Class of 2019.

Sincerely,
